 A Mother's Transformation From Innocence to Knowledge Driss Chraibi's Mother Comes of Age is an exceptional novel about an Arab woman seeking knowledge of the world. Despite the main character's age, the novel can be described as a bildungsroman because of her personal growth. This woman develops and matures from a secluded, uneducated woman to an informed activist, proving she is capable of anything.The novel begins with the mother ignorant to modern society.

 Mother comes of Age) to his last novel L'homme qui venait du passé (2004) (The Man from the Past), Chraibi retells fixatedly the French colonization experience in the Maghreb. Above all, Chraibi's entire intellectual trajectory and creative output is haunted by the notion of "civilization," which to him, evokes "otherness."
