In The Black Sun, Stan Marlan takes us on an unflinching and ultimately healing journey through the shadowed land of despair where most abandon all hope. There, we find, a strange light shines, and in that light we can discern what is otherwise invisible. Marlan teaches us how to see in the dark. — Murray Stein, author of Jung's Map of the Soul

The Black Sun is an esoteric symbol dating far back into antiquity, petroglyphs have been found in the Americas of this ancient symbol as well as artifacts discovered in 3000 year old graves of Nordic women such as the Zierscheiben pictured below. Since the masses are not taught true history or the true origins of most things this symbol is now mainly known for its placement in the floor at Wewelsburg Castle by the SS of the German Reich and the casual researcher won't look much further ...

He draws upon his clinical experiences - and on a wide range of literature and art, including Goethe's Faust, Dante's Inferno, the black art of Rothko and Reinhardt - to explore the influence of light and shadow on the fundamental structures of modern thought as well as the contemporary practice of analysis. He shows that the black sun accompanies not only the most negative of psychic experiences but also the most sublime, resonating with the mystical

Marlan's book The Black Sun: The Alchemy and Art of Darkness explores darkness as a metaphor for negative psychological experiences, such as despair and depression. As a rule, Marlan maintains, Western psychology treats such “dark” experiences as purely negative, i.e. as experiences to be avoided or, at best, “gotten
